props in on the Family Unannennee Says Reading of Her Case in Newspaper Brought Back Lost Mind-

then She Started Home at Once NEW HAVEN, Feb. 6 .- Miss Catherine Day, the sixteen-year-old daughter of Arthur H. Day who dropped out of sight on Friday morning when she started for achool, walked in unannounced on her family about noon to-day as they were about sitting down for lunch. Mr. Day was almost overcome when he saw his daughter apparently well and in her right mind. After the first exclamation of surprise he questioned her as to her whereabouts for the last three nights and a day in the Grand Central Station?" her father asked.

Yes, father, that's just what I did.' explained the girl. When asked to tell all about her movements from the time she left her home Friday morning until this noon when she reappeared Miss Day with some interruption told the following story: "I left New Haven on Friday morning on the Derby trolley and rode to the end of the line. Then I wandered about the city during the day and in the afternoon took a train to New Haven by way

"When I got to New Haven I took the 5:40 accommodation train for New York The conductor was very kind and asked me if I knew where I was going. I told him to my aunt's. When we arrived in New York he asked me if I would like him to show me the way from the Lexington avenue station to the Grand Central Station and I said yes, so he left me in the waiting room, where I stayed.

"I spent yesterday in the Lexington avenue and Grand Central stations and both nights I stayed in one or the other. This morning I picked up a paper that I found on the seat beside me and read the story of my disappearance. I suddenly realized who I was and that I was a long way from home. I asked the man who called the trains when the next train left for New Haven and he said 10:02, so I took that and came home.

When asked what she did about food she told her father that she had purchased food at the station.

When she left home it was said that she had only 25 cents, but on her arrival here she had still a larger sum of money. after paying her travelling expenses. She told her father that she had spoker to no one since leaving the train conductor on Friday until she recovered her mind and asked about the train to New Haven to-day.

She wore her school clothes that she had on when she went away, even to her arctics, that had been put on Friday because of the rain.

It was said here to-night that one o the women attendants at the Grand Central station noticed a girl answering Miss Day's description in the waiting room about midnight of Friday and asked her where she was going. "To New Haven," replied the girl. "But you can't go there until the 5 o'clock train. There's a train leaves for Stamford at 12:15 and you can go that far and wait if you want to," explained the attendant. Well, I guess I'll do that," replied the girl, who thereupon walked on toward

According to the conductor of that train no girl answering her description was on joard.

Osborne Day, an uncle of the girl, who WILL NOT OPPOSE ANALYSIS. Frank Baker, a friend of the family, had heen in New York since late yesterday afternoon assisting the police in their search for Miss Day. It is understood that they spent considerable time in and Grand Central Station last evening when the girl said she was sitting on a bench.

Miss Day is the granddaughter of the late Wilbur F. Day, one of Connecticut's wealthiest bankers, and her family have long been connected with Yale University. She was on her way to attend Miss John ston's private school here on Friday morning when she disappeared.

According to an announcement from the family to-night Miss Day had hardly recovered from a serious illness when she disappeared. Her mother is dangerously ill at a private sanitarium here and all news of her daughter's flight has been kept from her. Miss Day seemed very tired on reaching home and went to bed at once.

WESTINGHOUSE PLANT BURNED.

Establishment at Boonton, N. J., De stroyed Defective Wiring Blamed. BOONTON, N. J., Feb. 6.-Fire this morning destroyed all but one of the group of buildings of the local plant of the Westinghouse Electric Company. The principal product of the local works was storage batteries, but the plant was equipped for other work and at times turned out all the various electrical appliances which the company makes. The loss is estimated at $240,000.

The fire was discovered about 6 o'clock this morning. It was then burning on the third floor of the main building, where a number of electric wires centred. From this fact it is thought the fire was started by a cross or a short circuit. There was a high wind blowing and by the time the company's men and the fire department could be called out the flames had such headway that they were soon sweeping through the plant. Only the power house, which was to windward of the fire

Sparks and the great heat thrown off by the fire set a number of smaller buildings after at a distance, but each was saved by the details of firemen. The firemen, all volunteers, suffered greatly. Many had fingers and ears frozen and several are suffering from the exposure. About two hundred hands will be thrown out of work by the fire. The plant was one of the mainstays of the village.

the elevated railroad in West Fifty-third street and Mrs. Belmont entered the Mount Olivet Baptist Church to get the negroes into the equality line and form FAIRBANKS PRAISES CATHOLICS the first colored branch of the organization. There was a large attendance at the meeting, including a considerable number of men. Pastor Gilbert of the Mount Olivet church in opening the meeting and turning the church over to the women said that he was very glad to do so, as he firmly believed in the sub ject for which Mrs. Belmont and her sociates were working, and moreover cause this was, he said, the first time in the history of the negro race in this country that such a meeting had been held in a egro church.

Mrs. I. I. Moorman, president of the Negro Women's Business League, who had arranged the meeting with Mrs. Belmont, said that when she was making the arrangements she did not realize that she was engaged in a work which was to go down into history, but she beamed her pleasure at this ennobling prospect.

"Mrs. Belmont invites us to join her Political Equality Association," said Mrs Moorman. "If politics are dirty it's the men who have made them dirty and it is for us now to clean them up."

Mrs. Belmont, who was seated on the latform with Mrs. Henry Villard, Mrs. Ella Hawley Crossett, president of the New York State Woman Suffrage Association; Mrs. M. C. Lawton of Brooklyn Mrs. F. R. Keyser, president of the New York State Federation of Colored Women's Clubs, and Mrs. Moorman, said:

'Already, although you may not know it, you are perhaps feeling the call to the great work before us. Unless this call means freedom and equality for all it is a failure. The women of the country are still slaves in the twentieth century We need earnest workers in the woman suffrage cause. I earnestly invite you all to join, and the smallest contributions are gratefully received."

Mrs. Moorman, before treating the audience to a solo, said that the audience was disappointed only in the brevity of Mrs. Belmont's address.

Mrs. Villard, who was introduced as the daughter of William Lloyd Garrison, "I need not assure this audience that I have a deep interest in the people of the negro race."

She said that it was always to her great privilege to be permitted to talk of her father, which she did. Then she spoke of the days when it was hard for men to get a chance to hold meetings in churches, when women who were against negro slavery had difficulty in finding places in which to hold their meet-And she told of her father's taking a seat in the gallery beside the women delegates to a great international antislavery conference in London because the managers had not permitted the women delegates to have seats on the floor of the house.

"My father." said she, "said that he was not a woman's rights man out a human rights man. I feel that philanthropy cannot be well done until women have a voice in the municipal housekeeping. The ballot is the great thing that is needed to uplift the unfortunates who without must stay as they are and not only imperil themselves but imperil the whole ommunity. We should all stand together, and I hope that the colored women body was a good thing. Freedom of the mind is a much greater thing."

Mrs. Lawton induced the house to break into applause when she declared: "You may depend upon it that if women had the franchise every liquor saloon and gambling den in the land would be swep

EXPECT NO COAL STRIKE. Miners Not Likely to Go Out Before Fall,

It is pointed out that the convention here adopted a resolution which requires the miners to remain at work pending a settlement of the wage question and other demands made upon the operators, and it is said that this resolution was in ac-cord with the policy of President Lewis not to have a strike at a time when the operators would be practically independent of their employees.

President Lewis is said to favor remaining at work on the present wage during the summer if need be, for the operators can then afford to close their mines indefinitely and the miners would be starved into submission before winter be starved into submission before winter mines indefinitely and the miners would be starved into submission before winter. On the other hand, if the men remain at work till late fall or early winter and then strike they would at least have an even show with the mine owners.

It was this policy, it is said, that Lewis was pursuing in the anthracite fields when the settlement was made there one year ago, and he would have continued to keep the miners at work until the winter set in if the settlement had not been effected before that time.

Those in the confidence of Lewis are satisfied that there will be no suspension of work in the bituminous fields while the work is slack and the demand for coal as limited as it will be after the first of April till late in the fall.

CAUGHT P. O. THIEVES.

Kareber and Wife Argested in the Essex ESSEX FELLS, N. J., Feb. 6. - Chief of Police John P. Eysoldt of this place, aided by his brother Conrad, made capture of two post office thieves, man and wife, here early this morning. A third robber got away' but was arrested last night. The prisoners gave their names as William and Elizabeth Karcher Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont crossed the color of 34 Whittlesey avenue, West Orange. ine yesterday in her fight for political

They said the man who got away was Jack Waite, a resident of Orange. The chief and his brother were walking in Buttonwood avenue, which passes the Essex Fells station of the Erie Railroad, shortly after midnight. As the men passed the station the chief saw a light moving about the station, which is also the borough post office. Directing his brother to station himself at a side door, the chief approached the front door.

In a moment the thieves, frightened by the noise that Conrad Evsoldt made. rushed for the front door, shoving the roman ahead of them. She fell the chief's arms, and as he grabbed her the first man of the trio emerged. The chief drew his revolver and was about o aim at the man when the woman threw up his arm and the shot went into the air. Suspecting that there was a third member of the party still in the building, the chief made no effort to pursue the escaping man, but turned, still maintaining his grip on the woman, and entered the building. Conrad turned on the electric light and the chief saw the shadow of a man behind the door near which he stood. Karcher stood there with an upraised club. The two men fell upon Karcher at the same moment and overpowered him.

The interior of the post office was in a topsy-turvy state, all the packages of mail having been untied and scattered about the room while the thieves searched for plunder.

William Karcher is the son of the late Jacob Karcher of West Orange, who last fall received in a mysterious way injuries that resulted in his death.

Mrs. Karcher is said to be a retired circumstated.

The prisoners were arraigned before Recorder Herman Miller in Newark and were held in $2,000 bail each for the Grand

BOY WHO LOST $10,000 HELD

CHARGED WITH THEFT; HIS LAWYER HAS A THEORY.

Bill Must Have Flipped From His Pocket With His Handkerchief, Attorney Thinks-Parents Sure It Was a "Trance"-Bright Lad, Detective Says

Benson Lang, the seventeen-year-old messenger boy employed by the Stock Exchange house of Hornblower & Weeks at 42 Broadway, who was sent to deposit $10,000 gold certificate in the National City Bank on Friday morning and who appeared before his employers with his arents on Saturday noon minus the check and with a story of having been in a trance for several hours after he had started out with the money, was in the Tombs court yesterday on a short affidavit charging grand larceny. He went to the Tombs in default of $10,000 bail and his examination was calendered for Thursday.

Aaron J. Levy, who appeared as counsel for the messenger boy and who made a statement in his behalf, did not dwell upon the story young Lang had told on Saturday about the mental aberration which overtook him on the day he started out to deposit the certificate in the bank and which sent him wandering in Central Park and along Lenox avenue. Levy said the boy had started for the bank with a fellow messenger by the name of Ash-land, the big bill in one pocket of his overcoat and the bankbook in another.

Ashland stopped in front of the candy stand of P. Moschovites, a Greek pedler, o pay 20 cents he owed the pedler on account, and in fun Lang produced the $10,000 certificate, according to his law-yer's account, and demanded that the andy man take the 20 cents out of the certificate and return the change. After that he left Ashland and went on to the National City Bank. The boy carried is handkerchief in the same pocket with the certificate and Levy said he might have flicked the piece of valuable paper out in pulling out his handkerchief.

Lang himself made no additions to his story of Saturday, but his father, David Lang, a dealer in real estate who lives at 148 Lenox avenue, and his mother were vigorous in expressing their belief that the boy was not quite right in his mind. They said at their home that Benzon had been subject to irrational spells for some time, and they were sure it must have been in one of these spells that he lost the money.

The piece of paper has not been found by the Central Office men and the Pinkertons who have been working on the case since noon on Saturday. The Pinkerton detectives believe it is now in the hands of another person than the brokers' mes-senger and that it will remain hidden until the present possessor thinks it wise to the present possessor thinks it wise to dispose of it.

"It would be a pretty hard thing for a elever man to dispose of that certificate in so short a time," said one of the Pinkertons yesterday. "It would be next to impossible for a boy to do the trick. The certificate will probably remain hidden for some time yet, and tracing it will be rather difficult because Hornblower & Weeks do not know its number. It is much more likely that it will finally be presented for cashing outside of the country than in New York."

The fact that twenty-four hours elapsed between the time the messenger received the certificate and his reappearance at the brokers' offices with the report that he had lost it figures in the belief of the detectives that a second person had a hand.

had lost it figures in the belief of the de-tectives that a second person had a hand in the affair. This space of time Lang accounted for by saying that he wished to get advice before returning to the office to report the loss.

According to Detective Wilbur of Head-quarters, who made the affidavit on which the boy is held. Lang did not seem flighty or of weakened intellect when he was being examined in the offices of Horn-blower & Weeks and later at Headquarters. A quick and sharp young person is Benson blower & Weeks and later at Headquarters. A quick and sharp young person is Benaon Lang, Wilbur said yesterday.

It was said yesterday by a member of the brokerage firm that no suspicion had been aroused by the long absence of Lang on Friday, because it had not been noted. The bank book he took with him when he left the offices to deposit the check he was to have left with the receiving teller of the National City Bank to be balanced. of the National City Bank to be balanced, consequently there was no worry about the certificate until Saturday morning. In fact inquiry at the bank, which de-veloped the fact that the $10.000 certificate had not been deposited there, preceded Lang's return to the office on Saturday

Lang's return to the office on Saturday morning by only a short time.

No other employee in the firm is suspected, said this individual, for it has been proved that the gold certificate left the firm's offices in Lang's possession, and Ashland, the messenger who had seen Lang offer the piece of paper to the Greek candy man, had cleared himself.

They tried to impress upon the mind of the little groceryman the advisability of giving them $100 to prevent possible trouble.

Ah Foon screamed and Leong Lung and his friends ran from the store and into the arms of two policemen at Park row and Doyers street, just as it is done in the moving pictures. Ah Foon came panting up to the policemen a few feet behind his callers.

In the Oak street station house he said that he couldn't imagine what the four men could want of $100 from a poor little Chinese grocery man. He said that he didn't know anything about the tongs of Chinatown. didn't know anything about the tongs of Chinatown.
Some people in the quarter remembered that just such a man with just such a name was well connected with the On Leong Tong of Mott street. Also some people in Chinatown said that three man by the names of Dong Ho, Jung Joun and Tom Yuan—the names of the three who accompanied Leong Lung—were among those Four Brothers who were dismissed from the On Leong Tong a few months ago.
